Opintons of Foreign Powers. That Europe is not an uninterested speciator of affairs in America, and that the interests and there fore the sympathies of her Government are all on the Southern side, is freely admitted, says the Rich mond Dispatch, by the whole Northern press Whilst some of our own people are dispoted to think that Europe has no partialities for either belligerent, the New York Herald publishes a state ment of declarations which have been made since the commencement of hostilities, by different foreign powers, in relation to the attitude of the States towards each other, which, in its epinion, virtually prejudices the whole question at issue between North and South. England led off, in the procla mation, last May, of Queen Victoria, acknowledg ing the right of "Southern traitors and rebels" to be considered "belligerents." France fellowed in June, with a declaration of neutrality and an imperial decree against privateering. Prussia, at the same time, took the opportunity of urging the Uni ted States to accede to the treaty of 1856 Even the letter of Prince GORTSCHAROLF, written in July is conceded by the Herald to be "patronizing this

Therefore great pains should taken place in Ireland, Italy, France, Germa be taken by company commanders to secure this py, Hungery, Bosnia, and Polland without a sign of approbation or disapprobation on the part of the statesmen of the various foreign nations Observing events closely, they have nevertheless abstrined from official comment, while events here have startled them from their reserve, and caused them other cases, would have been considered indecorous."

It is absurd to comment upon the wilful blindness which will not acknowledge the difference be tween the withdrawal of sovereign Sates from the old Union, and a rebellion against an authority acknowledged to be supreme. Sufflice it that the whole civilized world, according to the Herald's admission, sees that question in the Southern and States Rights point of view; and that no nation under Heaven, except the North, which, in nutlifying the Fugitive Slave Law led the way in rebellion. considers the South "traitors and rebels." We have the opinions, the sympathies and the interests of all Christendom on our side, and shall, perhaps, before long, have its active co-operation.

The Law of Blockade.

The following circular, addressed by Lord Lrons to the British Consuls in the Contederate States, is accomp .nied by a letter from Secretary SEWARD on the law of blockade:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16, 1861 -Siz-On the 11th of May last I made to her Majesty's Consuls in the Southern States, the following announcement:

"Neutral vessels will be allowed fifteen days to leave port after the actual commencement of the blockade, whether such vessels are with or without cargoes, and whether the cargoes were shipped before or after the commencement of the block

I enclose herewith a copy of a note which I have received to day from the Secretary of State of the United States and in which he informs me that the law of blockade, which does not permit a vessel in a blockaded port to take on board cargoes after the commencement of the blockade, will be expected to be strictly observed by all vossels in blockaded by the naval forces of the United States You will take note of this communication of the Secretary of State for your own guidance and that of the masters of British vessels; and you will mark carefully, and report to me, the exact date at
